

Saturday, April 29, 2017

College soccer: Double jeopardy rule in soccer adjusted

Greg Johnson | NCAA.com

Last Updated - Mar 6, 2017 15:55 EST

Contact | Archive | RSS

The NCAA Playing Rules Oversight Panel on Monday approved a modification to the double jeopardy portion of the penalty for denying an obvious goal-scoring opportunity.

The panel, which met via conference call, supported the new rule that gives the referee discretion to issue a yellow card (caution) when a defender makes a legitimate attempt to play the ball when denying an obvious goal-scoring opportunity and commits a direct free kick offense in the penalty area. The awarding of a penalty kick remains a part of the rule.

Previously, when a defender committed a foul while denying an obvious scoring opportunity, a penalty kick was awarded and the official issued a red card to immediately eject the player who committed the foul.

Kickoffs and Restarts

The panel also approved a new rule that allows the ball to be kicked in any direction on a kickoff.

Previously, NCAA rules stated that the ball must be kicked forward on a kickoff. The change mirrors the rule that is used in international play.

Additionally, the panel approved a rule requiring that the ball must clearly move on any restart.

The panel also approved a new rule that allows the ball to be kicked in any direction on a kickoff.

Previously, NCAA rules stated that the ball must be kicked forward on a kickoff. The change mirrors the rule that is used in international play.

Additionally, the panel approved a rule requiring that the ball must clearly move on any restart.